Acupuncture Resource List

Many insurance companies cover acupuncture treatments. However, most coverage is limited to specific conditions. So even if you have acupuncture benefits, your condition may not be covered.

Please contact your insurance company to verify your acupuncture coverage and benefits.

Be sure to ask your insurer:

- Do you cover Acupuncture performed by a Licensed Acupuncturist?
- Do I need a referral from my Primary Care Physician?
- Will the Acupuncture treatments I pay for count toward my deductible?
- How many Acupuncture treatments am I allowed per year or per illness?

- Community Acupuncture means that acupuncture treatments given in a community setting. Instead of offering private appointments, one-on-one with a provider, you sit in a room where chairs are spread out and the provider circulates among patients. This is said to promote the flow of energy and healing. Typically, community acupuncture does not bill insurance but patients can pay on a sliding fee scale.
